ARTICLES BY THE EDITOR.

Court of Inquiry	1
Spanish Revolution.—The Stories from Spain are of a mixed nature.—The Loyal disbelieve the Corsican's Bulletins.—I believe them.—My reason for so doing.—Description of your true modern Loyalty.—The movements of our Troops have been hitherto quite unaccountable.—Horse Guards Philosophy.—Unless the People of Spain be let loose Buonaparté will prevail	9
Mr. Herbert.—His Address to the Electors of Hampshire worthy of notice.—His answer to the Pledge demanded from him by me.—He declares he never will accept of Pension or Sinecure .—But from Place he will not debar himself by any Pledge.—Persons once chosen to be the Guardians of the People's Money should never pocket any part of that Money. Mr. Herbert thinks it necessary that Members of Parliament should, at the same time, be Servants of the King.—This Doctrine proved to be in direct opposition to the Act of Settlement. Mr. H. says the Debates would become frivolous if the King's Servants were not in the House. The Debates! All is Debate.—If the House of Commons contained no Placemen, can it be believed, that the Public Money would not be better taken care of?	32

33	Spanish Revolution. —The Extracts from Sir J. Moore's Dispatches shew that our Army is in a perilous situation.—The "Loyal" vomit forth flames of furious Abuse against those who doubt the goodness of the Disposition of the Spanish People. But that Abuse will not alter the Fact.—Spain has been lost from the dread of Liberty.—A Population of 11 Millions is not to be subdued by arms, if they have arms to defend themselves, and hearts to use them - - - - -	41
115	Libel Law - - - - -	45
314	Spanish Revolution. —What is the fate that will probably attend our Army in Spain?—I, for my part, shall think that we are lucky if we avoid a Capitulation.—What diversion has Sir J. Moore made in favour of the Spaniards? The sort of diversion that would have been made by Lord Cochrane. Our Army costs us 23 millions of pounds sterling a year. The regular Infantry in July last amounted to 100,000, and the Cavalry to 25,000 men. What is this Army for? There can be no maintainable justification for the measures, or the inactivity which have led to the known dreadful situation of our Army. Have not this suffering people a right to demand a knowledge of the cause of this great injury and disgrace? - - - - -	65
686	"Loyalty." —Not vulgar Loyalty, but Loyalty in the modern sense of that Word.—Proofs of this most estimable quality in the Viscount Castlereagh, and some of his Relations.—Three Millions drawn from the Public, during the last 30 or 40 years, by six or seven Persons! There's Loyalty for you! "Jacobins and Levellers blush for shame!" "Jack Cades" hide your heads.—Real Services of the Cochrane Family - - - - -	75
820	Spanish Revolution. —The dismal news is at last arrived.—My Readers, at any rate, have from the first been prepared for what has happened.—Jocularity of the publications which have been made in the Ministerial papers under the title of Speeches made by Lord Castlereagh and Mr. Canning.—But, while Rome burnt, Nero fiddled; and it is universally true, that the Monkey and the Tyger meet in the same mind.—Shall no disgrace attend those who, having all the means of the Country in their hands, planned the Campaign of Leon and Galicia? It is grossly false to say that the Spanish Nation did not wish to be freed from Oppression: we never made them the offer. We royalized the Cause of Spain, and made it a contest between King Ferdinand and Joseph.—Dismal close of the Campaign.—Let us never lose sight of this important truth, that to induce a People to rise in arms against a powerful Invader, they must first, not be told, but be made to feel, that they have a Country to fight for - - - - -	97
852	West India Docks - - - - -	106
865	DUKE OF YORK. —Mr. Wardle's Motion "for the Appointment of a Committee, to inquire into the Conduct of the Commander in Chief, with regard to Promotions and Exchanges in the Army."—The important DEBATE of the 27th Jan. thereon.—Observations on the said Debate.—Mr. Wardle's Speech at once concise, plain, and impressive.—Sir James Pulteney (who marched against Ferrol), and others, extol the excellent Discipline of the Army.—Mr. Adam informs the House that "he had been for 20 Years acquainted with all the Duke's embarrassments, &c." And that therefore the Accusation must be false.—This Conclusion rather illogical.—The "heavy responsibility," to which Mr. Wardle had subjected himself.—Mr. Canning asserts "that Infamy must attach either upon the Accused or the Accuser."—A "Conspiracy," said to be on foot, for the purpose of talking and writing down the Duke of York, the Army itself, and all the Establishments of the Country.—Proofs of the said Conspiracy.—Messrs. Yorke and Canning assert, that there had been a series of Libels published against the Duke of York.—No man's character white-washed by an appeal to the Law.—"The Blessings of a Free Press."—"What is Freedom of the Press?" The Writers of former times surpassed in boldness those of the present day.—Instances thereof, from the Works of Pope.—Why not put down those publications? Why not put down the Works of Swift, and Gay, and Garth, and Akenside, and Churchill; nay, of poor Johnson; and of Milton, and Locke, and Paley?—I am resolved, be the consequences to myself what they may, to continue to exercise the Freedom of Writing and of Speaking, as my Forefathers were wont to exercise it, as long as I have my senses and the power of doing either one or the other. As witness my hand, WILLIAM COBBETT.	161

DUKE OF YORK.—An attempt on foot to deprive us of the remains of our Freedom.—A Mr. Wharton, Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, published a Pamphlet to inculcate the notion that Jacobinism is revived .—This is an excessively stupid and dirty performance.—My determination to keep the public attention closely nailed to the Inquiry going on relative to the Conduct of the Duke of York.—The Debate of the 27th of January continued.—Mr. Wardle's First Charge respecting the Exchange of Major Brooke.—Examination of Dr. Thynne, Mr. R. Knight, and Mrs. Clarke.—Review of the above Evidence.—Examination of Mr. Adam, Col. Gordon, and Ludowick Orramin.—Second Examination of Mr. Adam.—Mr. Adam produces a threatening Letter written in red ink .—This audacious Letter kindles wrath in the breasts of the Honourable House.—Further Remarks on the cry of "Foul Conspiracy," and of "Jacobinism."	193
DUKE OF YORK.—The eyes of every person in the Country directed towards what is going on in the House of Commons.—Effects which these abominations have upon the People in their individual and family capacity.—Mr. Adam's son a Lieutenant Colonel at the age of 21.—The altered language and tone of the House of Commons.—Commencement of the public Complaints made in behalf of the Duke of York against the Press.—"The Plain Statement" ought now to be re-perused and treasured up in the Memory.—Extracts therefrom.—Major Hogan's "Appeal."—Prosecutions resorted to.—An effectual way of silencing the Press.—"The Duke of Clarence's Birth day" from the Courier Newspaper.—Shocking effect of such examples.—The Debate of the 27th January concluded	225
DUKE OF YORK.—Analysis of the Examinations taken in the House of Commons.—The Adulterous Intercourse, The Duke's Letters to Mrs. Clarke.—The Annuity.—Establishment in Gloucester Place.—Case of Knight and Brooke.—Case of Captain Maling.—Case of French and Sandon.—Treatment received by Mr. Wardle from the House of Commons	257
DUKE OF YORK.—Remarks on the Re-examination of Miss Taylor.—The Duke of York's Letter to the House of Commons.—Strictures thereon.—Examination of the Set-offs to the Charges and Evidence against the Duke of York.—General traffic for Offices and Places under Government	321
To the Reader, on raising the Price of this Publication from Ten-pence to One Shilling	347
DUKE OF YORK.—The Analysis resumed.—Captain Sandon's Case.—Observations thereon.—Dr. O'Meara's Case.—The Doctor's famous Puff, on his preaching at Weymouth before Royalty.—Miss Taylor's Case	353
DUKE OF YORK.—Observations on a passage in Mr. Adam's Speech relating to my own Conduct respecting his Son.—Debate on the 8th of March.—Mr. Wardle's Address.—Mr. Perceval's Address.—Mr. Bankes's Amendment.—What is meant by "personal Corruption."—Observations on Mr. Wardle's Proposition.—And on Mr. Bankes's.—And on the three Presumptions which have been set up by the Defenders of the Duke.—"Popular Clamour"	385
Subscription for Miss Taylor	412
DUKE OF YORK.—List of the 125 Members who voted for Mr. Wardle's Address.—Observations on the Debate of the 17th of March.—Hopes entertained that the Duke will reform.—Mr. Canning's threat of Infamy.—Mr. Canning alludes to an Anecdote relative to an Ancestor of Lord Folkestone.—Lord Folkestone's reply.—Mr. Canning descended from

King's Speech at the Prorogation—Not one word in it respecting the affairs of the Duke of York, Lord Castlereagh, H. Wellesley, the Tinman's Prosecutor, and the Irish Exciseman.—A whole Paragraph in the Speech devoted to the Provision which has been made for the Poorer Clergy—Let the List of Non-residents be laid before the Public—Let the Benefices be filled up and there will be no poor Clergy—What will the Provision do ?—It appears to be a new scheme for augmenting the ministry's patronage—Let the stall-fed priest and the double-pursed pluralist remember that the poorer Clergy are his brethren—Let him be modest when he appears before us, who have to maintain his kindred—Parson Poulter, Dr. O'Meara, Dr. Locke, the Rev. Mr. Lloyd, the Rev. Mr. Beazeley, and the Crazy Parson, Williams—Talk no more of the tricks and the various base arts of the Methodistical or other Sectarian Priests—There has been scarcely a clergyman in all Hampshire, who has not done his utmost to give countenance to all that the people have been condemning—Let us ascertain whose clutches this money has got into—Let us see what sort of men the "poorer Clergy" are.—The King advises the Members of Parliament to carry with them, into their respective Counties, a disposition to incul-
